

COVID-19 and Moving to Another Hospital

COVID-19 is putting major demands on our health system, our staff, and our resources. There could be a time when we do not have enough beds available in a hospital.

If this happens, we might move a person admitted to the hospital, even from the Emergency Department, to one of our other hospitals.

Some people worry about whether or not specific care and services will be available at another hospital.

We have 12 hospitals within Fraser Health. Each of our hospitals has a variety of health services. If anyone needs a specific service that is not available within a hospital, the care team can always consult with a specialist or specialty service at another hospital.

We will always work to make sure everyone gets the best possible care and service despite the challenging conditions we are in right now.

Thank you for your understanding.
